Reference BA was cited, in the attached Japanese Office Action, as disclosing increases in main- and sub-dispersion peak temperatures according to dynamic elasticity measurement and orientation degree of a copolyester of 45-55 mol.% of butane diol component, 20-30 mol.% of terephthalic acid component, 20-30 mol.% of adipic acid component and 0-5 mol.% of a sulphonated compound component, as a result of stretching.

References BB-BD were cited, in the attached Japanese Office Action, as disclosing films and laminates of glycolic acid polymers.

In the enclosed Japanese Office Action, claim 1 was objected to as being broader than the working examples. This is the principal reason the crystalline aliphatic polyester of the present claims was restricted to glycolic acid homopolymer.

The JP '772 reference, cited in the attached Japanese Office Action, was previously cited in the Information Disclosure Statement (IDS) filed December 22, 2008.

The JP '771 reference, cited in the attached Japanese Office Action, was previously cited in the IDS filed March 18, 2005.

Respectfully submitted,

Daisuke ITOH et al.
